Duncan R. Cordry

Spirituality at the End of the World

Purdue University Doctoral Dissertations & PhilPeople Archive | 2023

Abstract

This work investigates how technical objects and systems support specific spiritual practices, traditions, and forms of social cohesion amidst contemporary ecological and psychic crisis. Drawing on Michel Foucault's late concept of 'political spirituality', Bernard Stiegler's organology and pharmacology of tertiary retention, Gilbert Simondon's theory of transindividuation, and Leonard Harris's insurrectionist ethics, this essay argues that liberatory politics cannot be reduced to material-economic restructuring alone: it requires a pharmacological transformation of attention, temporal orientation, and psychic-collective individuation.

Prototype reference copy

This sample PDF is included to make the staging preview links functional. Replace it with the approved publication file before launch.

PROTOTYPE - DUMMY DATA - STAGING PREVIEW